Welcome to the Spring 2021 Newsletter

Welcome to the FoDA Spring 2021 Newsletter and let us hope this truly is a new Spring and we can start meeting in person all over our wonderful County and sharing on the ground rather than the screen our local knowledge .

FoDA has become increasingly aware of community archives in many villages and towns across the County and has responded positively to overtures from DHS that we offer a joint membership to local groups. FoDA does not have many local affiliations and this way we can greatly increase these; we have much to offer by way of advice and support to local archive projects. Proposals will go to our AGM in November to introduce the joint affiliated societies' membership next year.

Meanwhile enjoy this newsletter.

Dates for your Diary – Forthcoming Conferences

The 2021 FoDA Annual General Meeting will be held on Thursday 4 November 2021 at the Devon Rural Archive – details to follow.

Joint DRA/DHS/FoDA Conference: Dr Ian Mortimer, The chief rents of Moretonhampstead, 1639-1840: how to use a problematic source. Cancelled for 2020, now arranged for Thursday 2 September 2021 at 7 p.m. at Devon Rural Archive.

Obituary

Mary Ravenhill

Mary Ravenhill was a long-standing member of the Friends of Devon's Archives who, with Margery Rowe – Devon's former County Archivist, who pre-deceased her by less than a year – co-authored two books which were published by the Friends during the organisation's early years. These were Early Devon Maps, published in 2000, and Maps of Georgian Devon, published in 2002. These, however, were only precursors to their Magnum Opus, Devon Maps and Map-Makers, published by the Devon and Cornwall Record Society and one of the finest gazetteers of English county maps ever produced. From the mid-1990s until a few years ago, Margery Rowe and Mary Ravenhill became very familiar to staff in archive searchrooms in Devon and beyond.

Mary Ravenhill's husband William (1919-1995) was Professor of Geography at Exeter University and a renowned expert on the history of cartography. His influence on her is epitomised by the books to which she contributed.

Mary Ravenhill died on 1st January 2021 at the age of 92.

Update from the Membership Secretary

So far in 2021 we have 161 members, 108 individual members, 13 Family members (counted as 26), 10 Groups and 17 Life members.

Two new members have joined us since January, and I welcome Rosemary Payne and Desmond Atkinson.

Sadly, I have been informed that two of our existing members have passed away: our Life member, Mary Ravenhill, and Julia Sharp. Their families have our sympathy.

SW Heritage Trust Report

Report for FODA newsletter May 2021

The pandemic has continued to have a significant effect on the Devon Archives and Local Studies Service. We were pleased to reopen our services in the autumn but have had further periods of closure of our searchrooms in November 2020 and from the start of January to mid-April 2021.

However, we are delighted to be able to welcome people again, with our services reopening under the same Covid-19 safe systems as we operated in the autumn.

Staff have continued to work from home and a huge amount of project work has been going on, as well as responding to very high levels of enquiries, research and copying requests. We have responded to these as efficiently as possible within the constraints caused by the lockdowns.

The Friends of Devon's Archives have again generously supported a new acquisition, enabling us to purchase the account book of William Walrond (1610-c. 1667), a member of the Walrond family of Bradfield House, near Uffculme. We also received support from the Friends of the National Libraries to support this acquisition. See our blog for further details: <https://swheritage.org.uk/news/walrond-account-book/>.

Some important audio archives relating to Devon are being digitised through the Unlocking Our Sound Heritage Project, which is a national project being led by the British Library. This will help with the long term preservation of these collections, and we are planning events relating to these collections to coincide with Heritage Open Days in September (keeping our fingers crossed that people will be able to attend events at this point).

Staff at both the North Devon Record Office and the Devon Heritage Centre have continued to work on creating an electronic location index, which will help greatly in providing access to collections. We are also busy testing the new version of our digital preservation system, which looks after digital archives. Technology is developing so fast in this area that the new system that was introduced in 2017 is already being superseded. We are benefitting from the work being done by Cade Simpson, who has joined us as a trainee as part of The National Archive's Bridging the Digital Gap scheme. Find out more about what he is doing on our website, <https://swheritage.org.uk/archives/news/cade-simpson-bridging-the-digital-gap-trainee>.

A project is also underway in collaboration with the University of Exeter and schools in Torquay to use digital technology to help primary school pupils use archives to learn about their local area. We are excited about the possibilities of this project, which will help bring archives to the next generation.

Suzanne Brown, a long-standing member of the team at the Devon Heritage Centre, retired in December after 17 years of service. She was a welcoming presence for thousands of visitors to the Heritage Centre over the years. With the easing of the lockdown we have been able to undertake recruitment, and two new members of staff will be joining the public service team over the next couple of months.

Online engagement has continued to be really important over the past few months. The Trust's Lockdown Lecture series reached audiences of over 300 at a time, with people joining from at least three continents, and a very keen researcher got up in what was the middle of the night in their country to join one of our online Q&A research sessions.

Applications for funding have continued to be an important priority and the Trust has been successful in applying for further Covid-19 Culture Recovery Fund money, as well as funding to support projects. This is a cause for optimism as we gradually open up services and welcome more people back to do research and to enjoy events.

Devon Archives and Local Studies: Documents Purchased with the assistance of the Friends of Devon's Archives, 2020-2021

Over the past year the Friends have once again provided financial assistance with the acquisition of several more documents, all of which are valuable additions to our collections.

Last autumn I reported on our purchase of a Tudor court roll for Bampton, and this was supplemented in November by the acquisition of a superb 17th century account book which belonged to William Walrond (1610-c1667), a member of the Walrond family of Bradfield House, near Uffculme. The volume's original leather cover and binding are in excellent condition. The cover bears the arms of the Walrond family, and is monogrammed with William Walrond's initials. The volume's early pages are mainly taken up with a range of Latin quotations and aphorisms and an indication that it first came into William Walrond's possession in 1634. However, the main series of estate accounts begins in 1650, and the majority of the rest of the book records the daily business of an English rural estate in the years which followed the English Civil War.

Entries record wages paid to estate employees and rent received from tenants, as well as money paid out for a wide range of estate and personal expenses. These include parochial poor rates and tithes and aspects of livestock management, but also more extensive and expensive undertakings such as 'what it cost me to repaire Woodhouse, since my father suffered it to bee ruined'. This precedes a detailed account of the renovation of part of the house in the years following 1647, including payments for such items as lead, nails and linseed oil, and money paid to masons, carpenters and plasterers.

There are also numerous references to grist and fulling mills, the purchase of furniture ('payd for a side Table at Tyverton') and clothing ('payd for a hatt at Exon'), while there is the additional inclusion of a survey of the Bradfield estate, undertaken by Edmund Crosse of Kentisbeare in February 1650.

In addition to the Friends of Devon's Archives, we received a grant from the Friends of the National Libraries. We are immensely grateful to both organisations, as well as Graham York, the antiquarian book dealer in Honiton who brought the volume to our attention.

In April of this year the Friends' Membership Secretary, Peter Towey, alerted us to a bound 18th century manuscript list of the patrons of parishes in the Diocese of Exeter. After discussions with Exeter Cathedral Archives it was mutually decided that the Devon Heritage Centre would be the most appropriate repository for the volume and we bought it with generous donations from the Friends and the Kent Kingdon Bequest. We are grateful to the Treasurer of the Friends, Ian Maxted, for arranging the Kent Kingdon grant.

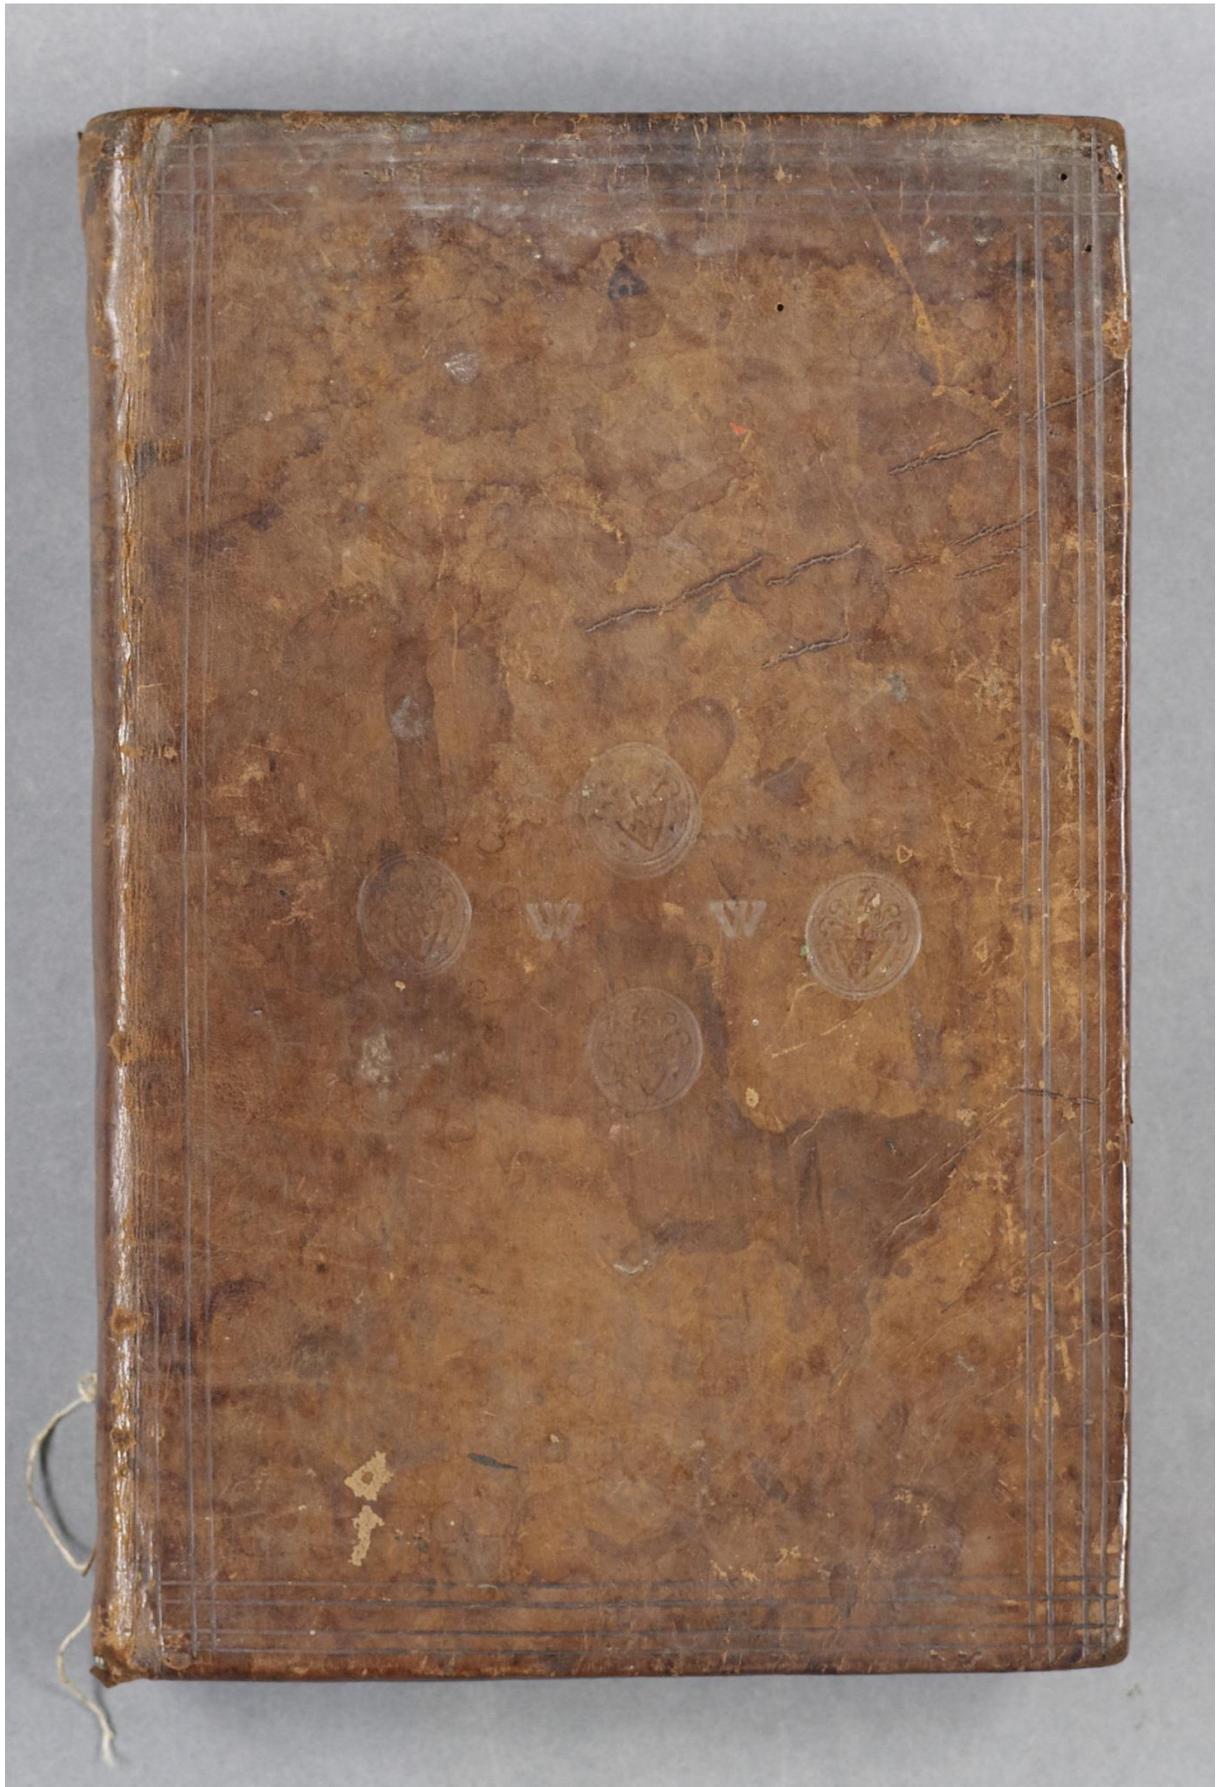

In addition to these items, the Friends also contributed to the purchase of some 19th century Annual Reports of Wonford House Hospital in Exeter by the Devon and Exeter Medical Heritage Trust, which it is hoped will be loaned to the Devon Heritage Centre once they have been digitised.

Norden Survey

Report on the Norden survey project by Des Atkinson

I would like to begin by thanking the FoDA committee for inviting me to take over the direction of Norden project. Dr David Stone has done great work in getting the whole project underway, and I know that I and the committee would all like to thank him very warmly for his expertise and for his invaluable support. The Covid pandemic has prevented us all from meeting up to share our experiences, so we have not yet had the opportunity to thank David in person for his hard work.

My own expertise lies in the late medieval and early modern periods on which I have worked over the last eight years for my master's and PhD theses. I hope therefore to be able to provide at least some of the skills that David has brought to the project.

Our volunteers have continued to work diligently on their transcriptions of the survey. For several of the manors that work is largely complete, and the volunteers have really done a great job. In dusting off their 'O' level Latin they have shown that they have the skills and determination to tackle all the more tricky passages!

With the transcription phase itself now making such good progress, it is time to think about analysing the information that the survey provides in more detail. There is much numerical information concerning landholdings, their size, their rental value etc., and the figures allow us to see the differences between various individuals, whether listed as knights, gentlemen, widows or those holding smaller plots. The surveyor was clearly exercised by what he saw as the over-exploitation of woodland in some manors, leading to the destruction of what had been some of the finest woodland in the county in late medieval times. There is therefore a rich amount of information, both quantitative and qualitative, to be extracted.

Our thoughts must soon turn to the publication of all this work. A full transcription and translation of the survey in digital form, complete with a suitable introduction will in itself be a notable output for the project. However, it will only be the start of what might follow in terms of more detailed local work. That is something we will want to discuss when we can all next meet up.

One pleasant activity that the survey will facilitate is walking the bounds. The set of articles for each manor includes a description of the bounds as they were identified in the early seventeenth century. Mapping those details on to the modern map will be a fascinating challenge where older place names have been superseded.

The set of tithe maps for all the Norden manors that have been purchased on CD provide a further challenge. The Norden survey was conducted in 1613 and 1614, whereas the tithe maps for the same manors date mostly from the 1840s. There was much change in the ownership and shape of the manor lands between those dates, making a reconciliation between the two sources quite daunting. However our volunteers continue to wrestle diligently with that task.

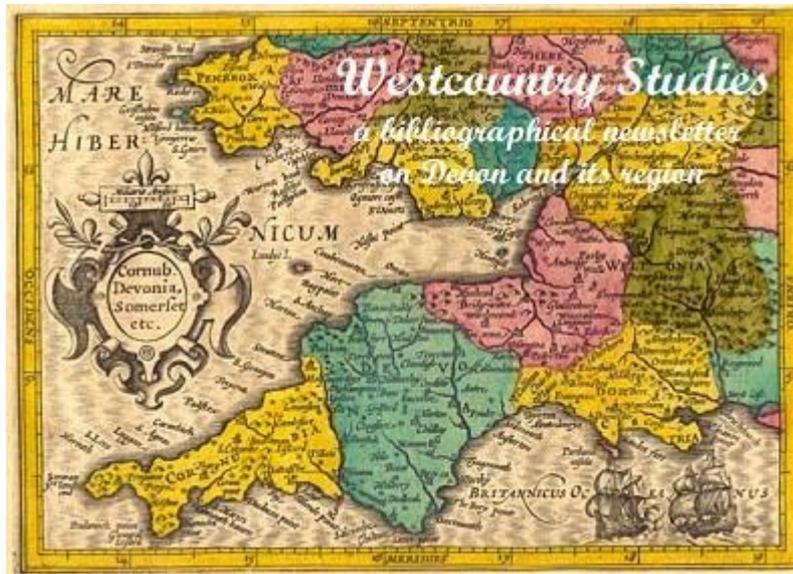

The wealth of information that is now available to the volunteers will provide scope for a whole variety of projects over the coming months and years. I know they have many great ideas about how they can enrich the history of their localities, using tools such as digital mapping etc. The broad range of skills that they have already developed, and the new ones they are ready to take on, means that this project is building a really strong base for independent research across Devon.

In conclusion I want to thank the volunteers again for their hard work and enthusiasm. I do hope to be able to come and visit all of you as the rules concerning the pandemic are eased.

Devon bibliography

The following is extracted from the May newsletter of the Devon bibliography which is available online.

Survey of recent publications recorded by the British national bibliography

The last four months of the British national bibliography from 13 January to 5 May were covered in a recent update of the Devon bibliography. The results certainly makes one aware of how much local material is being missed by BNB.

There are about 85 BNB records that have been identified as having some Devon or wider Westcountry significance although ten of these result from on-line and printed publications having separate entries in BNB. Of the 85, 49 are pre-publication records with limited information on pagination or size. There are 59 records for Devon-based publishers, 50 of them with no significant Devon content. There are 42 from Exeter publishers (14 from the reincarnated David and Charles, eight from the University of Exeter Press and six from Pelagic Publications as well as a sprinkling of other academic imprints) and four from Plymouth - the rush of Pilgrim Father publications has subsided. As to the date of the publications, 59 are for 2021, including the 48 pre-publication records, two for 2020, 2 for 2019, ten for 2018, ten for 2017 (including two Mint Press publications) and two for 2016. Of the 35 items with Devon or Westcountry content, 14 are fiction, 11 historical, three guidebooks, one on the natural environment and two periodicals, one of these on Covid-19. Amazon picked up a few additional titles for 2021 and even one for 2022, but it is difficult to search extensively. But where are the publications by local authorities and other local organisations?

Devon in the 1920s

Julia Neville had the idea of running a slideshow of colourful dust jackets of the 1920s as a sort of screen saver during a coffee break during the launch of the Devon History Society project when it was hoped that it would be a live event. I rashly volunteered but soon found dust jackets rather elusive for Devon titles of that decade. So I decided to look for books whose whole text had been digitised and which were freely available without need for subscription, thus providing a library available at home. Unfortunately the 1920s seems to fall within the 100-year watershed as there is a reluctance to digitise titles which might still have copyright issues. I gather that millions of volumes of more recent material that has been digitised by Google Books is kept in a secure location, only accessible to accredited researchers who can analyse the big data but not access the full texts. However there was sufficient to provide a guide to the range of sources potentially available, and at the Zoom launch event on 24 April there was a silent presentation of what I had gathered together. I have since put a fuller version of it on the internet as Devon in the 1920s : on-line resources. It is interesting that some of the items included are for works that have not yet been located in Devon libraries, so it supplements the other listings I have pulled together or updated for the project:

These supplement the listings produced by the Devon Heritage Centre.

A literary walk in and around Exeter

For the sponsored Men's Walk on Saturday 20 March to support Hospiscare a route with a literary theme was followed, perhaps with the walk that Professor Christopher Elrington undertook to promote the Victoria County History at the back of my mind. I took photographs as I went round to prove that I actually did it, and was staggered to find that I had raised more than £600 for an eleven mile stroll on a fine spring day. Coverage was extended on the following Monday and later days.

Interesting discoveries were made. At William Pollard's printing establishment in Sowton there was an interesting conversation with an employee with forty years experience in the printing industry who showed us their memorial garden with the wrought-iron gates transported from their Southernhay premises. On the University campus Exeter's Philip Larkin, former Exeter University Librarian and poet Alasdair Paterson, drew attention to a novella by the French writer Georges Perec (1936 – 1982). Les revenentes (1972) is a univocalic piece of writing in which the letter "e" is the only vowel used. A brilliant English translation by Ian Monk was published in 1996 as The Exeter text: jewels, secrets, sex (also univocalic) in the collection Three. It is set in a bizarre univocalic Exeter nobody would recognise, so unfortunately cannot figure in this literary tour, but we must ensure that a copy of the original and translation is available in an Exeter library somewhere.

It eventually became the Exeter Literary walk and, so large has the project grown, that it has become necessary to split it up:

Walk 1. The Cathedral Close and the West Quarter.

Walk 2. The High Street and around.

Walk 3. East through Heavitree to Sowton and Pinhoe.

Walk 4. North to the University and Saint David.

Walk 5. South through Saint Leonard to Topsham.

Walk 6. West of the river: Saint Thomas, Exwick, Alphington and Ide.

It has been fascinating to discover where Exeter's literary figures lived or worked and it has sometimes proved challenging with streets being renumbered over time. The rooms that the novelist George Gissing rented so that he could write in peace, away from his unstable wife have been located. The elusive Bill West has been run to earth, the writer on military intelligence, who lived by the conspiracy theory and assured me that his phone was being tapped and his mail intercepted. Library staff feared his visits, especially after he published The strange rise of semi-literate England, a polemic on the wholesale disposal of books by public and academic libraries. He found nothing to point the finger at in Exeter, but I do wonder what he would have made of what has happened since his death in 1999. It is also interesting to see the parallels in historical bookscapes across the country. The location of the earliest booksellers and printers in St Peter's Churchyard in Exeter mirrors the similar situation in St Paul's Churchyard in London, also a centre for the early book trades, before publishers moved back a block into Paternoster Row, just as they moved across to the High Street in Exeter.

Devon and Cornwall Record Society - the legacy of historians

Todd Gray has just finished masterminding a series of 39 posts on the Facebook page of the Devon and Cornwall Record Society which celebrates the contribution of "deceased historians, archivists, librarians, curators and archaeologists whose work has had a substantial mark on how we continue to understand or study Devon and Cornwall". He has now pulled together a document which combines all the contributions, which has just been circulated to the contributors. It is a substantial and varied compilation and it is to be hoped that obvious gaps could be looked for and filled and the dictionary be published.

William Chapple's rediscovered maps of Exeter

William Chapple was one of the historians covered by Todd Gray's DCRS Facebook series and interest in him has been highlighted by Todd Gray's recent discovery of three previously unknown maps of Exeter. They are contained in a volume with the cover title: "Nr 5. Manea curiosa et antiqua : draughts, plans &c" which is held in the Devon Heritage Centre in Exeter (reference 2610M/F3). These maps are much more professional than the efforts of William Birchynshaw, also discovered by Todd Gray and, rather than hearkening back to John Hooker's bird's eye view of 1587, are more in the tradition of John Rocque's finely engraved Plan de la ville et faubourgs d'Exeter of 1744. Map three is of greatest interest for bibliographical purposes. On folio 98 of Chapple's scrapbook, it has a pencilled title "A map or plan of the city of Exeter". It appears to be a working proof of a map which has been engraved on a copperplate 280 x 250 mm in size. The map itself is 249 x 221 mm in size and at a scale of approximately 1:7500. There are annotations in pencil and ink and a space is left blank, probably awaiting the text of a key to major streets and buildings.

It is clear that map 3 was intended for publication and map 1 appears to have served as a source for the engraver. Map 2 may have been intended as the basis of a printed map covering a wider area but both projects seem to have been abandoned, probably curtailed by Chapple's sickness and death. The scrapbook also contains some other maps and plans, mostly by Chapple. An untitled map of the country between Chagford and Moretonhampstead was clearly traced from Benjamin Donn's one inch map of 1765 and there is also "A plan of the Devon and Exeter Hospital at Exon" engraved in 1741 and a manuscript plan entitled: "A Plan of the Ground belonging to the Devon and Exeter Hospital" dated June 8 1744. Of interest are also Chapple's surveys with historical notes of ancient monuments in Devon. These include "A Plan of Berry Castle near Queen-Dart in Witheridge [...] Measured Sept 9th 177[3?]. "Berry Castle in the Parish of Woolfardisworthy & Hundred of Witheridge, survey'd Sept 9th 1773 and "A Plan of the Parish Church of Moretonhampstead, Devon; taken 25th & 26th July 1775. What might the other vanished scrapbooks have contained?

A digital bookshelf for Exeter

Continuing the 1920s digital initiative I pulled together an initial virtual bookshelf for members of the Exeter Civic Society which gives a further idea of the range of material that is being unearthed and I have started to search more generally into the treasures available through sites such as the Internet Archive, Hathi Trust and Google Books. Exeter is also well represented in Leicester's Historical directories project, partly because I sat on the steering group. Links to the digital versions will be gradually added to the Devon bibliography.

Devon bibliography, the next step

I have been frustrated by the inability to locate a database system to run the entire Devon bibliography. What is required is something similar to JISC discovery or the USTC but with a simpler interface for adding and amending data as, at a local level, it will be necessary to rely on unqualified and volunteer participants across the county. As an interim I have turned the entire bibliography on its head to produce the Devon Communities Bibliography, which lists many of the records at a community level. It is really an expansion of Abbots Bickington to Zeal Monachorum : a handlist of parish histories compiled on the occasion of the centenary of parish councils, produced by the Westcountry Studies Library in 1994. It is at the community level that the gaps will become most evident, as it is local researchers, organisations, libraries, museums and community archives that will be aware of what has been published on their patch. London, Taunton, or even Exeter is too remote to keep a track of what is happening across the more than 400 parishes and towns across one of the UK's largest counties.

Much of the community bibliography is still in embryo but the largest chunk has been bitten off with the Exeter bibliography. This is so large that it runs to a number of pages:

Books: Subjects A-B, C, D-F, G-L, M-O, P-Q, R-S, T-Z.

Articles: Subjects A-D, E-M, N-Z.

Manuscripts: chronological 325 BCE-1540, 1540 to date.

Maps 1587-date, Ordnance survey 1876-1997.

Exeter Diocese: Books.

Still to be added for Exeter are::

Newspapers 1704 to date

Periodical titles 1760 to date

Topographical prints 1660-1870

Photographs (a selection of publishers with numbered negative sequences) 1860-1960

Exeter city of literature

The project has recently appointed Anna Cohn Orchard as the inaugural Director. She comes from a background rich in literature, having lived in Pennsylvania, Sydney and New York and worked on literature based projects in each place. The website has also developed rapidly, and there is now a link to the Exeter Working Papers website in the Literary Devon section. It will be necessary to develop this so that it homes in better on the relevant sections, as the EWP website is international in coverage and more relevant material is with the Devon bibliography.

Two millennia of Devon's written heritage

There will be an illustrated zoom presentation on this topic to the Friends of Exeter Museum and Art Gallery on 21 July. Taking as its starting point two alphabets written in Exeter two millennia apart, it will track literacy in Exeter across the centuries, revealing the changing forms in which the written word reached people in Exeter from coins through graffiti, monumental inscriptions, scrolls, codices, illuminated manuscripts, printed books, broadside ballads, newspapers, periodicals, chapbooks and maps, and then into the digital world of the internet and social media. It hopes to show that there is a continuity running through all these developments. The internet has not killed the book, just as the printed book did not kill the manuscript.

Devon in the 1920s Project Update

I was pleased to see some FoDA members at the official launch of the project hosted by Devon History Society as a Zoom event on April 24th. If it lacked the opportunity for social interaction that the live launch planned and enforcedly cancelled last year would have had, the upside was that so many people were able to join in. Dr Stefan Goebel of the University of Kent's Centre for War Memory gave the keynote address, focusing on the Legacy of the First World War and vignettes of Devon in the 1920s showed the potential fields of research.

The South West Heritage Trust have now prepared guides to the sources for 1920s project work held in the Devon Heritage Centre and West Country Studies Library which will be of great assistance to researchers. Ian Maxted of the Devon Bibliography had prepared a presentation illustrating publications from Devon in the 1920s relevant to the project and available on-line. You may be interested in his presentation, now accessible at <https://devon-bibliography.blogspot.com/2021/04/devon-in-1920-on-line-resources.html> .

A number of people came forward after the event to sign up to undertake research, but there's still scope for more to join in. We're still looking for more family histories – if you know someone with family in the county in the 1920s, please put me in touch with them. We're also interested in contributions to our themes (see Figure 1). If you can contribute to any of these either by undertaking research personally or alerting me to what's already been published, please do so.

Mayflower International Genealogical Conference
Saturday 28th August 2021

The show must go on!

This conference was postponed from August 2020 to August 2021.

It was hoped that by that date, the Covid pandemic would be under control.

Although we all should have had our vaccinations by August, people may still be extremely cautious about attending a meeting with a number of "strangers".

I am writing this in March. Who knows what will happen in the next 5 months?

Personally, I don't want to risk organising an event in a public space.

After discussion with Devon FHS colleagues, it has been decided to hold this event online, via Zoom.

I am pleased to report that all of our speakers have agreed to give their presentations online.

Members who have already booked will be contacted with the option to transfer their booking or receive a refund.

I hope that many of you will decide to join us on 28th August 2021.

A full programme with the information on how to join, plus the order and times of presentations, will be circulated by email in early August. Please add conference@devonfhs.org.uk to your address book and check your Spam folder.

Due to copyright issues, the Conference presentations will not be recorded. They will only be available "live" on the day.

I am sorry that the revised arrangements prevent the attendance of the small number of members without online access, however, it will open up the event to a large number of members who are unable to make the journey to Plymouth.

I started planning this Conference over three years ago, so I hope that you will be able to support this long-awaited event!

The making of Mayflower exhibitions for The Box, Plymouth

With objects, images and ideas from museums, libraries and archives across the UK, US and The Netherlands, find out how local, national and international partnerships have changed perceptions of the ship, its passengers and an Atlantic journey made 400 years ago.

Cor de Graaf MA, Deputy Director Leiden Heritage

On the move

In the 16th and 17th centuries large groups of people were moving to other countries for different reasons. People from Flanders and Walloons moved to Norwich, people from England went to Leiden and groups of people went from Leiden to the New World.

Dr Nick Barratt - Director, Learner and Discovery Services, The Open University

When Harry met Dotty: in search of the Fullers

The ultimate brick wall - the chance discovery in 2018 of a birth record in Belgium, culminated in the revelation that our family was descended from the Mayflower Fuller family. Or were they? This paper delves into the life and secrets of Harry Victor Fuller, a chemistry professor from Minneapolis, whose ancestors sailed to America from Plymouth in 1620.

Phil Revell - writer & journalist

Shropshire's Mayflower Children

Born in Shropshire, seized from their mother, dispatched across the Atlantic – the story of Katherine More and the Mayflower Children.

Plymouth Archives at The Box

Plymouth Archives @ The Box, Plymouth Update for FoDA May 2021

The Box, Plymouth opened on 29 September 2020 after a delay due to the global pandemic. Six weeks later, the doors had to shut again. At the time, we made the decision not to restart the research element of the business until the New Year. Little did we know that at the end of December a further lockdown was going to ensue and, as we sit under Museum guidelines in the Government roadmap, our re-opening date is not until 17 May 2021. As a result, we are aware there will be increased demand for access to archives and we are preparing for that. All visitors who had their appointments cancelled have been contacted and re-booked as appropriate. We have also made special dispensation for professional researchers, allowing them to book more slots than we would normally accommodate as we are conscious the pandemic has had an impact on their businesses too.

In terms of the management of The Box, there has been a degree of change in the last few months. The CEO is retiring at the end of August and a new CEO has been interviewed and has accepted the post. They will start in the early autumn. Nicola Moyle, Head of Heritage Art and Film and a member of staff for over 25 years has now left and myself and my colleague Chloe Hughes are picking up the appropriate elements of her role in interim. We wish her all the best for the future; she has helped to give us a building and a service we are truly proud of.

Funding-wise we have applied for all recovery grant funding to which we were entitled, so 2021-2022 is encouraging in terms of finances. However, we are yet to operate at full throttle and, as a result, it is very difficult to plan beyond this year. We are obviously opening with social distancing in place and therefore only a small proportion of the possible footfall we can accommodate and with that will be reduced commercial income. From 21 June hopefully the future will be brighter for all of us and we are looking forward to an exciting summer of events and activities in person again. Many of the Mayflower400 events in 2020 were postponed for instance and several of these will now take place this year. A celebratory event will take place on Plymouth Hoe on Sunday 11 July which is ticketed but free to attend. Tickets are available through Eventbrite: <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/mayflower-400-four-nations-ceremony-tickets-153192383543>. We have also taken the opportunity to extend the onsite Mayflower 400: Legend and Legacy exhibition (which is a predominantly archive-based show) until the end of this year.

Excitingly we have flown over the Second Peirce Patent whilst we have been closed and this will be on display in the UK for the first time in 400 years from 18 May.

Our Active Archives gallery has also seen a refresh in the closed period and amongst other things we will be showing further material relating to the Plymouth Blitz – in reflection of this being the 80th year of commemoration. In our Media Lab gallery we also have two new chapters of moving image archive content, including again one relating to the Plymouth Blitz. We have also developed content in the closed period to acknowledge the passing of the Duke of Edinburgh who was Patron of the Friends of Plymouth City Museum and Art Gallery for many years.

Due to Government guidance, any books or documents viewed in Active Archives and the Cottonian Research Room will need to be quarantined for 72 hours after use but we are hoping to review that from 21 June onwards. We are still advising customers BYOD (Bring Your Own Device) is in operation. All catalogues and digital resources are available for free as long as people are onsite and signed into The Box's Wi-Fi. If this is not possible we do have some laptops available for onsite use but these should be treated as a last resort.

Any research visitors must book in advance and should email collections@plymouth.gov.uk. More information can be found here: <https://www.theboxplymouth.com/permanent-galleries/the-cottonian-research-room>.

Exeter Cathedral Library & Archives

After almost a year focusing on book cleaning, cataloguing, digitisation and other behind-the-scenes work, the Cathedral Library & Archives is getting ready to welcome researchers and volunteers back from 17th May, and planning various public exhibitions and events. The first event will be a celebration of Love Your Burial Ground Week (5-13th June) in partnership with the Devon & Exeter Institution (<https://www.caringforgodsacre.org.uk/get-involved/love-your-burial-ground-week/>).

As we reopen to the public, it will be as a newly reconstituted department. The Library & Archives, Education and Heritage are joining together in a new department, with some familiar faces and some new ones. Peter Thomas, the Cathedral Librarian retired at the end of 2020, having been in post for 43 years. Luckily he won't be a stranger and will still come in from time-to-time. Emma Laws, Assistant Librarian, completed her temporary contract at the Cathedral but has returned to her original voluntary role in the Library working on improving the catalogue for the medical collections. Ann Barwood, Canon Librarian, is moving to a new role in the administration of the Cathedral, having managed the service since 2003. Ellie Jones will continue as Cathedral Archivist working closely with Lisa Gordon as Head of Education. Two new team members are expected to start in May/June 2021. We look forward to reporting to FoDA members on these exciting new developments in future issues of the newsletter!

Ellie Jones, Cathedral Archivist

Devon & Exeter Institution

Website says Step 3 reopening plan to be implemented no earlier than 18 May.

Our Region Revealed: the Devon and Exeter Institution's prints and drawings collection

Founded in 1813, the Devon and Exeter Institution is a thriving independent library and educational charity in the heart of Exeter with a diverse membership of all ages. The founders resolved to establish an Institution to promote 'the general diffusion of Science, Literature and the Arts; and for illustrating the Natural and Civil History of the County of Devon, and the History of the City of Exeter'. However, they had a wider vision for the Institution: it was to be a library, a museum and an intellectual centre for debate and scientific enquiry. Indeed, the Royal Albert Memorial Museum (RAMM), which was founded in the 1860s, has its origins in the Devon and Exeter Institution.

Over the past four years, and due to an initial investment from Historic England and the National Lottery Heritage Fund, the Institution has widened its reach and begun to explore its potential as a provider of excellent public programming and learning and engagement activities for all ages and abilities. The Institution's historic library and West Country studies collection is available to individual and joint members, Exeter University staff and students, accompanied Junior members, temporary members (daily or weekly) and institutional members, including local libraries, museums and heritage organisations. The Institution is a vibrant community and much of its work is facilitated by an enthusiastic volunteer team, drawn from its membership. People at all ages and stages describe the Institution as a unique space for learning and research, for well-being and for connecting with others.

At the heart of the Devon and Exeter Institution is a fine historic book collection which underpins its research and learning and engagement programmes. The collection reveals the intellectual, political and cultural interests of the Institution's earliest members and benefactors, from natural history, biology and zoology to history, travel and exploration, music, art and architecture, theology, mathematics, science and engineering. Westcountry newspapers and periodicals were collected from the outset, now a rich resource for local studies. As well as books, the Institution also built up a miscellaneous but highly significant collection of prints and drawings, maps, photographs and printed ephemera, reflecting the founders' and subsequent members' interests in the art and topography of the South West.

While the Library's books were eventually catalogued on the University of Exeter's library management system, the prints, drawings and paintings remained, until recently, unsorted, uncatalogued and, ultimately, unknown. With initial funding from the Pilgrim Trust in 2019, and with subsequent funding from the National Lottery Heritage Fund in 2020, the Institution set in place operations and systems to undertake a project to preserve and digitise the collection. With support from the Devon Heritage Centre, a team of volunteers set to work cleaning and sorting the artworks and the Institution launched its online public access catalogue with an initial batch of about 270 drawings and 7 Edward Ashworth sketchbooks digitised by TownsWeb Archiving. Staff have discovered some fascinating items, including a beautiful collection of engraved trade cards and many pencil, pen and ink and watercolour drawings of Devon buildings and landscapes. The most striking items, including several stained-glass designs from the Exeter Diocesan Architectural Society collection, feature in the Institution's new range of merchandise:

The Covid-19 pandemic has escalated the need for online access to collections. While the Institution has had to close during three national lockdowns, staff have been able to use digitised artworks creatively to divert people isolating at home with online jigsaw puzzles, research call-outs and social media posts. However, there is still a long way to go until the entire collection is rehoused, catalogued and digitised and can be embedded in the Institution's learning and engagement programme.

With a further grant from FODA, the Institution has purchased a graphic arts A3 scanner so that over the next three years fragile artworks can be scanned on site. The Institution is very grateful to FODA for their continuing generous support of the project. Devon Rural Archive

DRA Update April 2021

Admission to the Archive is still by appointment only and numbers are strictly limited. We are currently unable to offer open-shelf access to our resources and instead select relevant material for each visitor ahead of their arrival, based on a telephone consultation at the time of booking. In doing so we are able to keep track of items that have been used and ensure they are available (and not quarantined) when they are next required. Bookings are high with roughly a two week wait for appointments.

At the end of 2020 we invested some time in updating our branding both in the building and online and are particularly proud of our new streamlined website. Please do take a look at what the Archive has to offer www.devonruralarchive.com.

It is just over twelve months since we had to suspend our events programme, and so until we can meet in person again, we have decided to embrace the virtual world and revive our programme via Zoom. Our first talk was given by Martin Read and explored Plymouth in 1620, when the Mayflower put down its anchor in the Cattewater ahead of its journey across the Atlantic. Participants joined us from across the county and from farther afield, including Norfolk, Herefordshire and Durham. Dr Todd Gray will give our next Zoom talk, Finding the Thread: the last hurrah of the Devon Cloth Industry, on Thursday 27th May 2021 at 6pm. If you would like to be kept up to date with our work, events and exhibitions you can sign up to our free monthly e-newsletter through our website.

The Archive is open to the public on a Monday, Tuesday and Thursday between 11am and 3pm (other than Bank Holidays). There is no charge for using the resources, but booking is essential. For more information or to book an appointment please call 01548 830832.
